New Website and Spanish Translation Unveiled For New Jersey Parents

New Brunswick, NJ –

Recognizing that most parents need a little help understanding how to best support their child's education and learning, the New Jersey Parent Information and Resource Center (NJPIRC) unveiled a new website design and updated content for New Jersey parents at www.njpirc.org. The website also includes a complete Spanish translation for the first time, extending their wealth of information to an even larger demographic than ever before.

Parents with children of all ages can access content specifically geared toward them, ranging from preschool and early education all the way up through the college application process. Material for special needs and children attending Title I schools is also available.

In addition to a wealth of written content, NJPIRC also has downloadable audio podcasts with interviews and tips, along with on-demand webinars for parents and schools to catch up on the latest education news and strategies to help their children get the best education.

New Jersey parents and educators are encouraged to visit the new NJPIRC website at www.njpirc.org and explore resources available to assist them in providing the best future possible for their children.

About NJPIRC

The New Jersey Parent Information Resource Center (NJPIRC) is a program of Prevent Child Abuse-New Jersey (PCA-NJ) and has been funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Education. NJPIRC provides leadership and technical assistance to non-profit organizations and local educational agencies to help organizations put successful and effective parental involvement programs in place. Their policies and activities lead to improvements in student academic achievement.
